"How do you feel about the impact of this movie on Cayman Brac and the Sister Islands as a whole? Do you think it will give too much exposure or have any negative implications for the Sister Islands?"

MLA for Sister Islands Moses Kirkconnell

The high caliber of professionals making this movie and the positive way the island is portrayed in the story means that the Brac will be introduced to a large number of people in the best possible light. In terms of publicity, Cayman Went will be invaluable, but because they have gone out of their way to use local people, this project has also meant a great deal to Brackers in a very personal way. It's been a wonderful experience.

Craig Burhart - Indepth Watersports

"I believe the filming of Cayman Went is and will be a great thing for the Brac. Not only were we able to showcase the entire island, but just having the industry professionals here doing the production was a huge success for the island. They all left with fond feeling about the Brac and its people. We have already seen bookings from the event and expect to see more. I only see this as a win-win situation. This was a lower budget film but it could pave the way for larger budget films to be shot here. We are talking 50 Million plus. I can't see how we could do any better. I'm proud to say that everyone involved was impressed by the hospitality shown by everyone here. We left a very good impression on all of them. Cheers Cayman Brac !! Well done !!

Derry Lee Martin - Assistant Programme Coordinator, Heritage House

Wonderful opportunity for the Brac to be exposed and seen by the world; and this will enhance further development on the Sister Islands. My son Jacob Scott is also in the movie and this will expose him and other residents to the career of film making or acting. I also believe that young people need more flexibility in terms of career choices and not limiting their potential. I can't see any negative implication of this movie being filmed here, but indeed many were exposed to the fine art of film production.

Mona-Lisa Tatum - Communications & Marketing Manager, National Gallery of the Cayman Islands

I feel the strongest promotional pull of the film will be towards the residents of Grand Cayman. I feel that many people over there on the main island have not taken advantage of the nature tourism or relaxing atmosphere that the Sister Islands has to offer. Hopefully the film will send a message/invitation to residents and visitors who have yet to experience the beauty and serenity of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, if not through content, through its visual appeal of the Sister Islands and its people.

Deloris Miller – Care Giver

I believe this is good exposure for Cayman Brac--people will come to recognize the other side of the island and bring about the hidden talents to light for those who have an interest in acting and film making. This can only be positive for the Sister Islands in terms of attracting more tourists and fostering further development. "There should be more activities to showcase the Sister Islands more".

Chris Randall – Manager Weststar TV Ltd for Sister Islands

There is no such thing as bad publicity. When this movie goes out to cinemas the world would be able to see the other Islands of Cayman. Publicity is good for development but this would have to be for Cayman Brac's choosing. If someone sees the Islands as a fantastic location to make money in terms of establishing businesses, the idea must be reinforced by the residents and the idea must be at a pace for Cayman Brac culture.

Jose Fonseca – Store Manager West End Texaco

This was a fantastic opportunity for the island to show off to the universe. When people talk about Cayman Islands, they only think of Grand Cayman. I was once in that category as no one knows about the other two Islands which in fact they need to know how beautiful and quiet these Islands are. The filming of the movie has impacted positively on local businesses and the residents. Workers here at West End Texaco felt the difference and even if someone doesn't think they have benefited individually, on a collective basis, the country will see the rewards. For a long time we have not sold so much diesel oil and other local businesses such as restaurants, supermarkets, hotels and condominium have also benefited. I hope there are other producers who will see the beautiful Island and come here to do some filming.

Alton Campbell – Carib Sands employee

A great experience for Cayman Brac community and this created the opportunity to generate revenue for the economy. The experience garnered to see the production of a movie is phenomenal, especially the scene with the bon fire at the Public Beach. With no doubt, millions will be able to see and hear about the beauty of the Sister Islands and the wonderful hospitality the community has to offer. "It was fun getting so close to a producer and having a rap with him and other staff members. It seemed like I was in Hollywood when I saw all the equipment and the staging of some of the scenes."

Jennifer Ebanks - Landscaper Ministry of Education

I strongly believe this will market the Brac very well. Most time people only think of Grand Cayman and have no experience of the warmth of the Sister Islands. With this type of exposure, people will experience and see the tranquility of the Sister Islands. This venture has brought about numerous business opportunities for the Island and we, as Brackers, should really do some introspection and examine how unique our community is and try every possible means in preserving it. It's also a great way to showcase our talent and encourage others to come to the Sister Islands for vacation or whatever purpose they see fit.
